Your Monthly Dose of Income Insights...

Updates You Can't Miss

Industry Intel:

Why "not buying in" could cost more than you think...

At first glance, asking patients to collect high-cost medicines like Nexplanon or Zoladex from a pharmacy might seem like a money-saving move—but it can quickly backfire. If the patient forgets the item or turns up with medicine that's been stored incorrectly, tampered with, or unsuitable for use, it can lead to wasted appointments and clinical risks. On the other hand, buying in comes with its own pressures—managing expiry dates, cash flow, and storing a backup supply.

It's essential to weigh the risks to determine what works best for your practice and have clear policies in place for medicine reuse and contingencies.

Behind the Scenes: Meet a team member

Hi, my name is Rui. I'm the Head of Software Development at Enhanced Technology. My role involves overseeing the full software development lifecycle, bringing both technical expertise and creative problem-solving to every project, ensuring our products are delivered.

A typical day for me includes collaborating with the team, turning ideas into code, adding new features to the products, or debugging a tricky issue.

Outside of work, I enjoy cycling, playing squash, and spending time with my wife and two daughters, who keep me busy!

“ Client Testimonial - Referral Programme

"After using the GP Profit Recovery service in my own practice, where they managed to find over £13,000 in unclaimed prescriptions, I have been advising practice managers to take up this service whenever I am teaching and mentoring my sessions.

Therefore when Daniel reached out to let me know that there was now a 'thank you' referral system in place, with Amazon vouchers for referring such a fantastic service, I was absolutely thrilled. To be given a thank you for letting people know what an amazing experience I had with GP Profit Recovery was simply the icing on the cake.
